A traffic driver for you, a reward for good citizens.

Dear Mark,

I work for Kintera, a company that services nonprofit organizations. I am currently building an incentive program to encourage nonprofit fundraising participants to get more involved online. We service over 80 clients, including AIDS Walks, Arthritis Foundation, MS and more. We provide tools that allow nonprofits to reach their constituents online, build personal pages for each participant and email friends, family and coworkers about their fundraising efforts in a fun, secure and easy environment.

We are building a test program and would like your company to participate. We are looking for 2,000 online discount coupons for participants in the Alzheimer's Memory Walk in San Diego on 11/10/01.

Ultimately, I'd like to find a way to roll out incentives to all of the events we host. This year, we have reached over 800,000 participants doing well for the community. Next year, we will top 1,000 events and 2 million people.

The demographics of these participants are: 18-49, Adults, with a high disposable income and an affinity for the Internet. We offer an easy way to reach these participants and we're only looking for incentives to distribute that will drive traffic to your site. You choose the discount; we'll distribute it for you.

Here's how we see the program working:

-Nonprofit participant raises money for their cause online.
-At the end of the fundraising period, we email them the coupon codes of our partners. -We can build a system that distributes your unique coupon code numbers per participant if you prefer, or, just one code for everyone. It is your
